CONTRIBUTORS TO THIS NUMBER

R. W. RYDER

is a lawyer now residing in California. His interest in matters of public service and welfare has led him to assemble data concerning problems of immigration on the Pacific Coast.

C. REINOLD NOYES

is a graduate of Yale University, who since his graduation in 1905 has been engaged in business except for the period of his service in the Army during the World War. Mr. Noyes is now the president of a large mercantile corporation.

CASPAR F. GOODRICH,

Rear-Admiral in the United States Navy since 1904 has held a number of commands and has done a great variety of duty in the Department. He commanded the Pacific Squadron in 1905-6, and was Commandant of the New York Navy Yard from 1907 to 1909. He retired in January, 1909.

received his Bachelor's degree from Amherst, and his professional training at Harvard University. He acted as Attorney for the Department of Justice before the Spanish Treaty Claims Commission in Cuba. Since 1906 he has served as Special Attorney under the Department for Customs Litigation.

WILLIAM ELLIOT GRIFFIS,

the distinguished student and author, has many volumes to his credit relating to the Pilgrims. The more familiar titles include The Pilgrims in Their Three Homes, and Young People's History of the Pilgrims.

JOHN A. GADE

has just resigned his post as U. S. Commissioner of the Baltic Provinces of Russia. This service secured for him the impressions he has embodied in the present essay. During the war Mr. Gade was Naval Attaché at Copenhagen and received the Naval Cross.
